Radio Free Asia (RFA) delivers uncensored, accurate domestic news and information to audiences in China, Vietnam, North Korea, Laos, Cambodia, and Burma. For people living in those countries, where free speech and free press is heavily restricted, RFA's in-depth, unflinching journalism provides a lifeline to the truth and counters authoritarian disinformation and false narratives. RFA also offers a platform for ordinary people to voice opinions and share perspectives that would otherwise be censored or ignored by state-controlled media.

“In the age of disinformation and manipulated news, I always have to confirm with RFA whether news is true or not.”

– Comment on RFA Burmese Facebook

Issues addressed in features and programming among RFA's nine language services include human rights abuses; religious, ethnic, and racial persecution; corruption; forced land confiscations; and health risks. RFA uses multiple platforms, including short- and medium wave radio, satellite transmissions, TV broadcasting, the internet, and social media to deliver content to its audiences.

Its investigative reporting has earned awards from the Society of Professional Journalists, Radio & TV Digital News Association, Alliance for Women in Media, Amnesty International, and the Society of Environmental Journalists, among others. The network's reporting is picked up by both global media and news sources in its target regions, including The Wall Street Journal, New York Times, The Washington Post, BBC, CNN, Reuters, AFP, Kyodo News, Yonhap, and South China Morning Post, Bangkok Post, among many others.

MISSION

As outlined under the 1994 International Broadcasting Act (P.L. 103-236), RFA’s mission is to provide accurate and timely news and information to Asian countries whose governments prohibit access to a free press.

PROGRAMMING

RFA’s all-digital facility is equipped with 29 studios, allowing our nine services to produce news, analysis, commentary, and cultural programming. Today, RFA has expanded from its radio programs to include documentaries, in-depth web reports, graphics and e-books online as well as on social media. Since 2015, RFA has garnered over 43.5 million fans across Facebook, YouTube, and Twitter providing social media videos and call in shows, and redistributing citizen journalist content.

IMPACT

First informing the world about the creation of Xinjiang’s prison state. RFA was the first to inform the world about the brutal detention of millions of Uyghurs in vast internment camps, and the build up of a high-tech security state in Xinjiang, making the human rights crisis — which the U.S. designated as a genocide — increasingly difficult for China’s leaders to deny. RFA continues to break key stories related to this ongoing crisis.

Reporting on the crisis in Burma. After serving as a critical source of information following the military coup in February 2021, RFA continued to closely follow the ensuing civil war between the junta and anti-junta forces. Between June and October 2022, RFA released its three-part investigative series into the atrocities committed by the Burma junta in the war-torn Sagaing region after receiving a cache of photos and videos from a soldier’s lost cell phone. RFA Burmese’s jaw-dropping findings were the first pieces of hard evidence of the Burma military’s war crimes and violence against civilians, going viral on social media and garnering more than two million views in one week on YouTube and Facebook.

Covering historic protests in China. RFA’s timely coverage of the demonstrations against the government’s zero-COVID policies in late 2022 led to record-breaking digital engagement numbers for its Mandarin and Cantonese services. RFA Uyghur first reported that the victims who died during the Urumqi apartment fire, which triggered the protests in China, were Uyghurs.
