“People are hungry for the unbiased information that RFE/RL provides, and we are committed to supporting it, despite the Kremlin’s efforts to suppress media freedom.”

— Rep. Mike McCaul (R-TX)

For 70 years, Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty (RFE/RL) has brought independent media to audiences hungry for the truth. More critical than ever, RFE/RL is reaching growing audiences, countering disinformation, and reporting from the frontlines of global events from Russia and Ukraine to Iran and Afghanistan.

MISSION

RFE/RL reports the facts, undaunted by pressure. RFE/RL adheres to strict ethics of professional journalism and editorial independence.

PROGRAMMING AND ACTIVITIES

RFE/RL has comprehensive strategies to counter Russian and Chinese disinformation that is prevalent across its broadcast areas. For example, new offices in Riga and Vilnius will house expanded reporting teams with the Russian Service and Current Time, a 24/7 Russian-language platform, to reach growing audiences with investigative journalism, programming about the Baltic region, and non-news content, among other initiatives. Many RFE/RL Services report on Chinese investment and other forms of influence for their audiences across Eurasia.

“We need you now more than ever before. You are a critical voice, a credible voice, to counter the propaganda and disinformation of Russia.”

— Sen. Ben Cardin (D-MD)

In January 2023, RFE/RL was the subject of CBS' "60 Minutes" on reporting from the frontlines of the war in Ukraine and RFE/RL's central role combatting Russian malign influence.

In many coverage markets, RFE/RL is an important antidote to violent extremism. RFE/RL's Afghan Service and Pashto-language Service for Pakistan's tribal areas provide local news using diverse voices. Each has profiled victims of attacks and provided emergency and public health information. As a result, these services are considered trusted public broadcasters.

RFE/RL's local services are also known for their deep investigative reporting, frequently focused on exposing public corruption. RFE/RL's Central Asian services, for example, regularly cover abuses of state authority, often receiving international recognition.

In partnership with the Open Technology Fund, RFE/RL successfully circumvents state censorship to bring audiences truthful reporting. From Russia to Iran, RFE/RL promotes the use of free and effective VPNs. RFE/RL also uses mirror sites, community messaging platforms, and Tor for safe and anonymous browsing.

IMPACT

Since Russia's invasion of Ukraine in February 2022, traffic to RFE/RL websites from within Russia increased to record numbers despite significant Kremlin censorship. Both at the war's start and at key moments, video views from within Russia surged, demonstrating the immense appetite of Russian-language audiences for truthful coverage. RFE/RL's award-winning coverage is meeting this demand with extensive reporting on Russian atrocities, censorship, and more. Based on a 2022 national survey, 10% of the adult Russian population report consuming RFE/RL content weekly.

The Ukrainian Service's investigative reporting unit "Schemes" has broken news repeatedly about Russian atrocities in Ukraine and alleged war crimes. Schemes' reporting on sanctions evasion and other topics has been carried by multiple international media outlets.

While sanctioned in December 2022 by the Iranian regime, Radio Farda successfully circumvents censorship to reach growing audiences inside the country. In the months following Mahsa Amini's death, Radio Farda has demonstrated its commitment to countering state propaganda by profiling victims of police violence.

In 2022, RFE/RL documented numerous incidents targeting its journalists across its broadcast regions in connection with their work. Despite the Kremlin's systematic crackdown on RFE/RL to targeted attacks in Afghanistan, Belarus, Iran, Kyrgyzstan, and beyond, RFE/RL remains committed to bringing the whole truth to its audiences.
